"The Pros and Cons of Living on Mars"

Scientific American

DECEMBER 1, 2023

The article questions the justification for establishing a permanent Mars settlement. It highlights challenges like high costs, contamination risks, and conflicts with scientific goals. While acknowledging potential benefits in scientific discovery and economic opportunities, the author argues that urgent global issues and uncertainties make large-scale Mars settlement ethically and practically questionable.

Elon Musk launches profane attack on X advertisers

BBC, Nov 30th

Some firms including Disney or Apple have decided to boycott X after an anti-Semitic tweet by Mr. Musk. He first apologized about it but then at an event in New York, he started insulting the company. "What this advertising boycott is going to do is it's going to kill the company," he said.

He has also warned the brands that this will not be without consequences and that the whole world will know about it.

“ Logan Sargeant: Williams retain American driver to complete 2024 F1 grid”

BikeSportNEWS, Nov 26

Williams has officially confirmed that American driver Logan Sargeant will remain with the team for the 2024 Formula 1 season, finalizing their 20-driver grid. Sargeant, at 22, secured one point in his debut season and will team up with London-born Thai driver Alex Albon. Expressing his excitement, Sargeant stated, "I am thrilled to be continuing with Williams Racing for the 2024 season. It has been an incredible journey, and I am grateful for the opportunity to develop further within such a talented group. We have exciting plans, and I can't wait to contribute to the team's success."

Sargeant made F1 history by becoming the first American to score in 30 years, earning his lone point at the United States Grand Prix in August due to disqualifications of Lewis Hamilton and Charles Leclerc. Williams Team Principal James Vowles expressed satisfaction with extending their partnership, noting Sargeant's exceptional skills and expressing confidence in achieving greater success together in the upcoming season.
