Pakistan reels from floods

Pakistan has been suffering from severe warmth and drought during the whole year.

The country endured deadly heat waves (over 50 C°) and wildfires.

Now, they are getting stuck by a record monsoon and a third of the country is being flooded. Antonio Guterres, United Nations general secretary described it as a the biggest "climate carnage" he has ever seen.

Britain's lowest-paid workers say finances have never been worse

According to a new study by the Living Wage Foundation, almost 80% of the UK's lowest paid workers say they are currently facing the greatest financial pressure of their lives. These people do not have enough money to eat properly, to the point of skipping a few meals, which seems very worrying given the current climate and the coming winter.

Why Patagonia's Billionaire Founder Just Gave Away His Company

The international brand had always tried to fight global warming and ecological destruction by developing eco responsible materials and donating part of its profits. Despite these actions, Patagonia's founder thought that it was not enough so he gave the whole company to a non-profit organization for preserving environmental values.

Dutch city of Haarlem may be world's first to ban most meat ads

The city of Haarlem, located in the Netherlands will enforce a ban on meat-related advertisements. The proposal originates with the green political party GroenLinks, as this sector produces more than 14% of all greenhouse gas emissions. If it isn't cancelled by opposition parties, meat companies, and meat-eating Dutch people, the measure will come into effect in 2024.

Artemis I lunar mission has new date for next launch attempt

The second test of launch of the Artemis I project is delayed by four days because of some leak on the fuel reservoir. So we will have to wait until September 27 to maybe see this rocket launch. The launch will be harder because of the launch window which is shorter than it should be.
